In the death of Senator Redfield Proctor Vermont loses an able statesman. For years he has been a very prominent member of the United States senate, a man close to the hearts of his constituents, a man whose counsel and favor has been sought and a power for good. The state mourns his loss.

The Cleveland school horror again demonstrates the fact that public buildings should be thoroughly examined by a competent board with the express end in view of the safe exit of the occupants in case of fire. Think of 171 little lives crushed, burned and smothered out, when possibly changes of such small things as the swinging of the doors out rather than in would have saved many lives. There are many more just such fire traps in our meeting places and school-houses and no one knows where the next horror will occur.

SENATOR PROCTOR DEAD.

Vermont's senior senator, Redfield Proctor, died at his compartments at the Champlain house in Washington Wednesday afternoon at 4:50 o'clock after a short illness of pneumonia and resultant heart failure. He has been ill since the opening of the present session of congress, but not till February 26th, when he took cold, had been considered dangerously sick.

His sons, Gov. Fletcher D. Proctor and Redfield Proctor Jr., with the other members of his family except his wife, were present at the death, having been summoned several days before.

The body was brought to Proctor and the funeral was held there on Friday afternoon and the body was interred there.

Both the senate and house adjourned after having passed resolutions of respect and elected a delegation from both bodies to accompany the body home.

Redfield Proctor, son of Jabez and Betsey (Parker) Proctor, was born in Proctorsville June 1, 1831. He was graduated from Dartmouth college in 1851, and from the Albany Law school in 1859. He was admitted to the Vermont bar the same year and for two years practiced his profession in the office of his cousin, Isaac F. Redfield, at Boston.

Upon the outbreak of the Rebellion in 1861 he returned to Vermont and enlisted in the 3d Vt. Vols., being commissioned lieutenant. He served on the staff of Gen. "Baldy" Smith, and in October, 1861, was commissioned major in the 5th Vt. Vols. and commanded this regiment at Gettysburg.

Returning to Vermont, he formed a law partnership with Wheelock G. Veazey at Rutland. Taking the receivership of a Rutland marble concern in 1879, he became manager of the Sutherland Falls Marble Co., which later, through consolidation, became the Vermont Marble Co., with Col. Proctor at its head. This concern has become the largest marble company in the world. Some years since Redfield Proctor withdrew from the management of the company and was succeeded by his son, Fletcher D. Proctor.

In 1867, Redfield Proctor represented his town in the legislature and again in 1868. In 1874 he was a state senator; in 1876, lieutenant-governor of Vermont, and in 1878 governor of Vermont.

In 1889, President Harrison appointed him secretary of war, there he served with distinction during Harrison's term.

By appointment of Governor Page, Redfield Proctor entered the senate as the successor of George T. Edmunds, and has been elected two successive terms since. In the cabinet and in the Senate he has been regarded by the country as one of America's strongest and ablest men.

Redfield Proctor was married in 1853 to Emily J. Dutton of Cavendish. The wife and three of their five children—Fletcher D., Redfield Jr., and Emily D.—survive.

STATE NEWS

Building of City Hall Deferred.

Montpelier voted not to build the city hall it has been talking about for several months and have deferred all action till another year at least. There was some sharp debating on the question and the matter of location and style of structure seem to be the hitch between two factions in the city.

4500 Men Out on Strike.

Business was suspended Monday in the entire granite industry of Washington county, also in South Ryegate and Morristown, as a result of which 4,500 men are idle and 200 plants have been shut down. This action is the result of the rejection by the union labor organizations Saturday night of the proposition made by the manufacturers, who are willing to make a three years' contract at the old scale of an average wage for the cutters of 37½ cents an hour. The men demand a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour. The entire business of Washington county is affected and a speedy adjustment of affairs is hoped for.

Vermont Elections.

Vermont elections passed quietly Tuesday and the "No" vote gained some ground. Returns show that only 28 (33 last year) towns and cities voted yes and of these only about five are large towns. Burlington's vote was the greatest surprise when it flopped from the no to the yes column by a vote over 700 majority, a change of over 1200 votes from last year. The towns and cities voting license follow: Bakersfield, Bennington, Braintree, Brandon, Burlington, Canaan, Castleton, Chester, Colchester, Danby, East Haven, Fair Haven, Highgate, Hancock, Isle La Motte, Middlesex, Orange, Pownall, Rutland City, Richmond, Somerset, Shelburne, Shoreham, Stowe, Swanton, Vernon, Wells, West Rutland, Caledonia and Orleans counties went solidly no license. Not a large town or city on the east side went for license, the great surprise there being the vote in Rockingham (the village of Bellows Falls), and in the city of Barre. St. Albans went no license for the first time since the law went into effect in 1903. Bennington and Rutland of the large places alone held to license. The following 15 turned from license to no license: Arlington, Brighton, Barre city, Jay, Middlebury, Pittsford, Rutland town, Richford, Rockingham, St. Albans city, St. Albans town, St. George, Starksboro, Victory and Woodford. The eleven additions to the license places this year are: Bakersfield, Brandon, Braintree, Burlington, Colchester, Danby, Orange, Pownall, Richmond, Stowe, Swanton.

GENERAL NEWS.

171 Children Burned to Death Wednesday.

171 children, possibly more, between the ages of six and 15, perished Wednesday in a fire that destroyed the Lakeview public school at Collingwood, a suburb of Cleveland, O. The disaster was attended by horrors unparalleled perhaps by any like calamity. Scores of children met a terrible death, while their parents and others strove in wild frenzy to drag them from the piled up masses in which they had formed in their efforts to escape from the burning building. So tightly had the children become wedged just inside front and rear, that not one was disengaged and saved, and they died before the eyes of those helpless to rescue them. The front doors of the school-house were locked when the fire started in the basement and swept up the wooden stairways and through the building, and it is evident that the children became massed inside in a narrow passageway before workmen from the railroad car shops near by were able to break down the doors. The rear stairway was so narrow, and the spread of the flames was so rapid that most of the children who tried to escape that way were quickly in a jam, from which no human power could extricate one of them. Pinned in the narrow hallways, jammed up against doors, that only opened inward, the little ones died by fire, by smoke and beneath the grinding heels of their panic stricken playmates.

DOES THE PARISH OWN THE PREACHER'S WIFE?

(A paper read before the ministers' meeting at Irasburg recently.)

I take up this successful subject with some fear and trembling, knowing myself incompetent to decide so vital a question or to discuss at any length a theme so broad that truth could and ought to be said both in the affirmative and the negative, realizing also that whichever side I take there will be many whose views upon the subject are positive and contrary to my own. However I trust you will bear with me and rest assured that no personal thrusts are intended.

Since this subject was assigned me I have put the question to preachers, preachers' wives and to parishioners and am surprised to find the prevailing idea to be that the parish does not own the preacher's wife, for I am of the opinion that at least the real success of the preacher, aside from his own consecration depends quite largely upon how much his wife feels her obligation to him, to his parish and to God.

To be sure the preacher's wife has her own home cares the same as other women. Her first duty is there. Her husband serves the public and is subject to constant and often severe criticism, he needs her cheer and sympathy. His work necessitates constant mental strain which at times is very exhausting and long drives between services as well as upon funeral occasions and calling tours often cause real physical suffering; he needs her tender ministrations of comfort even more than those in other occupations. Her children require as much care and attention as other children. Yes, they require more for it would never do for them to go ragged or dirty even a few hours. They require more than the ordinary amount of training for more is expected of them. They are subjected to the prevailing influence of petting and flattery on every hand, which transforms itself into criticism if proper training has been lacking, it will never answer for them to become proud or selfish and they must be taught to be quite impartial in their likes and dislikes of people and places.

It is no more the duty of the preacher's wife to entertain strangers than of others, but as a matter of fact she is expected to and does. Usually the strictest economy must be practiced which adds to her perplexities. Yes, the preacher's wife must give more than ordinary attention to her home cares for if the parish does not own the preacher's wife it does expect her children and home to be an example of the highest type. How then can she do parish work outside the home? In the January number of the Ladies' Home Journal there is a "rule of three" given for preachers' wives which I think the parish would do well to adopt in the main:

"Keep out of the church kitchen,
Keep out of church begging,
Keep out of the church choir."
In every parish there are those who are very competent in the church kitchen, who are willing and glad to work there, who do not feel at ease elsewhere. Besides, at every church gathering the preacher's wife is really the hostess and should be out among the guests. Certainly the kitchen is

Business Principles, as Applied to Savings Banks

From Essex County Herald
Despite the marvelous growth of advertising in late years, the casual observer might question the wisdom of its extension to the business of a country savings bank.

But results refute theories, for we are informed that the Hyde Park Savings Bank, during a six months' advertising campaign, increased its deposits nearly a quarter million dollars.

We have a savings bank in our village. We cannot, however, withhold a word of praise for the business sagacity of ex-Gov. Page in thus keeping Vermont money in Vermont, a policy at once patriotic and mutually beneficial.

Printer's ink, combined with careful and square business methods, has made Hyde Park the hub of the local industry, and the same agencies bid fair to make it widely known as a center of savings.

NEW CURE FOR STOMACH

F. D. Pierce Gives Barton Readers A Chance to Try It.

Since nobody knows when people have suffered from indigestion, sick headaches, bloating, dizzy spells, distress after eating, sleeplessness and the many other symptoms of stomach troubles and have found the usual remedies powerless.

Here is a chance for Barton readers who may suffer weak stomach to test without risk of loss the new prescription, called Mi-o-na, for indigestion that has met with great success wherever it has been tried.

This treatment, which strengthens the whole digestive system so that the stomach does its work without any distress, is sold by F. D. Pierce under a guarantee to refund the money if the remedy does not do all that is claimed for it.

Mi-o-na costs but 50c a box, and one box will do more real good than a dozen boxes of ordinary digestive tablets.

The Family Physician

The best medicines in the world cannot take the place of the family physician. Consult him early when taken ill. If the trouble is with your throat, bronchial tubes, or lungs, ask him about taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Then take it or not, as he says.

We publish our formulas
We banish alcohol from our medicines
We urge you to consult your doctor

Bilious attacks, sick-headaches, indigestion, constipation, dizzy spells—these are some of the results of an inactive liver. Ask your doctor if he endorses Ayer's Pills in these cases. The dose is small, one pill at bedtime.

no place for the preacher's wife. And as for the church begging surely it would seem that this was out of her jurisdiction, but if she have musical talent together with time and strength I do not see why she should not use it especially in the rural parish where such talent is sorely needed. Surely it would require a woman of more strength and ability to be at the head of every society, attend all of the meetings, and call twice or three times a year on every family in the parish besides keeping her home and children up to the ideal, as the parish which thinks it owns the preacher's wife demands. But on the other hand let the pastor be as consecrated as he may and inspire as much interest and zeal as is possible, it soon dies out if his wife evinces little interest and consecration and openly declares that it is his work, let him see to it, she has her own cares and is under no obligation to put herself out, she draws no salary, if others have time and want to, all well and good, let them. Oh how wise and independent it sounds! Let us see then who of all these earnest workers is under obligation. Who has been hired?

Not the Sunday school superintendent, nor the presidents of the Epworth League, Ladies' Aid or the Missionary societies, neither are the choir and organist of our rural parishes hired, even the treasurer or financial agent receives but little appreciation of the time, thought and effort expended in making the ends meet year by year. So far as I can judge the parish really owns only the pastor and the sexton. The compensation of these is not large enough to demand any great amount of service.
